Karen: I see that dad put $600 into your account today -- how much was the check that you wrote?
me: 700
Karen: Exactly $700, did that include utilities?
me: not entirely me: I wrote that amount cause didn't know how much we could pay me: I'll give them the difference if they ask Karen: Don't you know how much your rent is and don't they put the utility bill on your door?
me: yes
me: I didn't know much we could pay, thoiugh Karen: What do you mean, COULD pay? me: Um, I mean it in literal sense me: like, how much money dad had Karen: OK, why don't you walk over there right now, ask for the balance due and write check for difference. Otherwise you'll be liable for late fees. Today is the 5th.
me: because they're not in today me: I went by when dad dropped me off me: no one was there me: they also weren't there the other day when I dropped off check me: I think they're busy with frozen pipes Karen: OK, doi you have a copy of your lease with the rent amount on it? And a copy of the latest utility bill that they left?
me: no
me: I never saw utility bill me: I put 700 because that should about cover it me: I'll call them monday and see what else is needed me: right now I'm working Karen: Last month's check you wrote to Carlisle was $831.06.
Karen: Are you stil out of money? Do you have food for the weekend?
me: got food, yes
Karen: OK, will see you Monday then for your 2:30 appt?
me: indeed
